Some students have a background or story that is so central to their identity that they believe their application would be incomplete without it. If this sounds like you, then please share your story.

Discuss an accomplishment, event, or realization that sparked a period of personal growth and a new understanding of yourself or others.

Share an essay on any topic of your choice. It can be one you've already written, one that responds to a different prompt, or one of your own design.

Where To Find Stories?

- Describe an adversity you've faced. Why was it a challenge? How did you overcome it? How did that experience change you?
- Choose a time when you did something that took a lot of courage, a time when you didn't follow your friends or a time when you stood up for your beliefs. Why did you decide to make a stand or try something that took courage?
- Think about an event in your life that seemed bad, but turned out to be good. Tell the story of the event and how an event that seemed negative turned out to have valuable consequences.

How to find your story

- What are you passionate about? Why?
- Brainstorm a list of experiences, accomplishments and activities. Focus on what these meant to you, not on the actual events.
- What personality traits and values set you apart? What makes you unique?
- Remember: Generating a topic is a process. Be patient.

How you can start preparing now

- Practice answering reflective questions such as, “What is important to me?” “Why is this important to me?” “How did I make that decision?”
- Some schools post essays from applicants that they accepted. Read those essays to see what they’re looking for.
- Once you have a list of schools that you are going to apply to, make a list of the schools’ names and the deadlines for their applications. This will keep you on track for writing your essay(s).

How parents can help during the writing process

- Make sure your child answers the question/addresses the prompt.
- Provide time management by helping your child set a schedule.
- Prioritize essays and stick to deadlines. Remember that writing is a process. Make sure you leave enough time.
- Proofread the essay for grammatical errors, spelling mistakes, complicated language, and confusing logic.
